

Special UT Southwestern Category: Sustainable Art

Sustainable Art

In 2013 this category was established by UT Southwestern for art consisting of the visionary use of recycled materials (that is, materials which have had a prior use before they were incorporated into any work of art).

Artists who wish to enter in this category must also enter in one of the other visual categories if they wish to be included in the judging by Business Council of the Arts judges, who are not affiliated with UT Southwestern.

Entries in the “Sustainable Art” category will be judged by a separate group of UT Southwestern judges.

NOTE: Works that need maintenance or may decay will not be accepted.
