2. Race, George J., Selected Recollections of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School, Dallas, Texas \(Dallas, 1997\)

Separated Material: Some oversize records related to the Medical School are stored in the Archives flat file drawers. These records include a movie poster for the 2009 senior film, a photo of the December 1944 graduating class, and certificates of commendation recognizing the V-12 Navy Program and Army Specialized Training Program which operated at the campus during World War II. The yearbooks and scrapbooks in this collection are also housed separately.

Arrangement: This collection is arranged into seven series: Series 1: Medical School Departments; Series 2: School Records; Series 3: Publications; Series 4: Printed Materials and Ephemera; Series 5: Photographs; Series 6: Commencement and Ceremony Programs; and Series 7: Scrapbooks.

Biographical/Historical: Southwestern Medical School began as Southwestern Medical College of the Southwestern Medical Foundation. Under the leadership of Edward H. Cary, M.D., and Karl Hoblitzelle, a group of prominent Dallas citizens organized Southwestern Medical Foundation in 1939 to promote medical education and research in Dallas and the region. When Baylor University elected to move its school of medicine from Dallas to Houston in 1943, the Foundation formally established Southwestern Medical College. When a new state medical school was proposed after World War II, leaders of Southwestern Medical Foundation offered the college's equipment, library, and certain restricted funds to The University of Texas, provided the University would locate its new medical branch in Dallas. The Board of Regents accepted this offer from the Foundation, and in 1949 the college became Southwestern Medical School of the University of Texas. In 1954 the name was changed to The University of Texas Southwestern Medical School. The present campus site on Harry Hines Boulevard was occupied in 1955 upon the completion of the Edward H. Cary Building.

In 1972, the Medical School was re-organized into a Health Sciences Center in which there would be three component schools: Southwestern Medical School, the Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences, and the School of Allied Health Professions. Since 1974, UT Southwestern Medical School has enrolled approximately 200 freshman students each year. In addition to the more than 800 students in the four-year undergraduate medical curriculum, more than 1,400 clinical residents and postdoctoral fellows receive training at the school and its affiliated hospitals each year. According to the 2011-2014 Medical School catalog, "The school is dedicated to the education of physicians who are thoroughly grounded in the scientific basis of modern medicine, who are inspired to maintain lifelong medical scholarship and who will care for patients in a responsible and compassionate manner."

Scope and Contents: The records document medical school functions and activities from its founding in 1943 to present. Planning Committee files in Series 2 help to document the Medical School's 10-year expansion plan, which encompassed the plan to re-organize into a Health Science Center and vastly expand the physical growth of the campus with many new buildings.

Correspondence, reports, and other materials highlight the operations of the medical school when it was known as Southwestern Medical College (1943-1949). Also are records that document the offer to the University of Texas to takeover operations of Southwestern Medical College. Other records include annual reports of the Dean from the 1950s-1960s, medical school department records, and some records which highlight alumni relations, including an alumni newsletter that was distributed in the 1950s and 1960s. Of note is the strong representation of records which help to document students' academic and extracurricular lives on campus, as witnessed through student publications, scrapbooks, senior problem research papers, a sophomore quiz file (circa 1966), yearbooks, and commencement programs. Also of note is a letter written to the medical students from President Richard Nixon in 1969.
